COURSE DESCRIPTION
The Honors Symposium offers focused exploration of a topic selected annually by the Honors Council. This year, the topic is Work, Money, and Meaning: “Making a Living, Making a Life.” Presentations by guest faculty from a variety of disciplines will alternate with your related projects and round-table discussions. The guest faculty events will be open to the campus community in order to stimulate wider dialogue. This course will emphasize critical thinking, written and oral skills, and intellectual collaboration.

What are the Humanities?
- The Humanities ask questions about meaning, value, and significance.
- The Humanities include all disciplines that employ interpretive, non-quantitative methodologies to probe and express the human condition.
- Some subjects, such as art, history, music, religious studies, philosophy, and literature, lie almost entirely within the Humanities domain, while others, such as education and the social and behavioral sciences, have significant Humanities components.
- The Humanities embrace one another across boundaries, stressing the importance of interdisciplinary study and collaboration, striving to connect disparate fields and to integrate knowledge around the experience of being human.
- The Humanities are also a primary vehicle of cultural memory. They preserve, transmit, and critique the experiences of humanity.
- The Humanities deepen our understanding of ourselves and our place in the world.

This course is one of two “gateway” courses required for admission to the Honors program. The other course is HUM 195 HN (Honors Seminar: The Integration of Knowledge) on the topic of happiness, a 3-credit course that meets from 10:00-11:00 on Mondays and Wednesdays. You may take both of these courses simultaneously. The prerequisite for both courses is completion of English 101 with a B or better. You’ll find more information about our Honors program later in this syllabus and at www.everettcc.edu/honors

COURSE PREREQUISITE:
Completion of English 101 with at least a B

STUDENT LEARNING OBJECTIVES
Upon successful completion of this course, you will be able to
1. . . enumerate the unique contributions of some Humanities disciplines
2. . . synthesize these diverse disciplines and perspectives
3. . . analyze and interpret ideas from a variety of Humanities perspectives and methodologies.
4. . . . integrate the insights of the Humanities with the insights of other fields of study
5. . . . critically assess their own conceptions of meaning and value.
6. . . . employ clear and broadly accessible language in all forms of interpersonal communications, including writing, discussion, and presentations, avoiding the specialized jargon peculiar to individual disciplines.
7. . . . show competence and confidence in written and oral communications.

REQUIRED TEXTS & MATERIALS

1. You will be assigned articles from journals, books, and websites which you can access for free.
2. The Man Who Quit Money by Mark Sundeen

COURSE REQUIREMENTS

1. ATTENDANCE & PREPARATION:
   Your presence and active participation are an integral part of this course. Please come prepared and on time each day, having carefully read your assignment. I encourage slow, thoughtful reading, accompanied by your active engagement with the text via notes and underlining. If you do not understand your reading, you should slow down and read it again. If you have repeated difficulties with the reading, please come and see me! Perhaps I can make some suggestions that will help.
   Your questions and observations will enrich this class. We need each other’s questions, perspectives, and mutual help to fully understand the ideas and concepts that will be presented, so please don’t be shy!
   How else is attendance rewarded? The more consistently you attend, the better chance you’ll have of getting a high score. In addition, points will be awarded for correct answers on quizzes, and for participation in quizzes and course opinion polls.

2. ASSIGNMENT POINTS:
   These points will be awarded for participation in class quizzes and polls. Correct answers will score the highest points but all participants will earn some credit. Points will also be awarded for any other assignments occurring in class or online.

3. ESSAYS & ROUNDTABLE DISCUSSIONS
   At weekly “Roundtable Discussions,” selected students will present brief response essays based on the preceding guest faculty lecture. Each of you will do this once during the quarter.
   --- Presenters will receive a grade for their essays and another grade for their performance during the oral presentation of the essay and the ensuing discussion.
   --- Responders: Other randomly selected participants will also be graded on the quality of their interactions and responses (several responders’ names will be drawn at the start of each Roundtable).

4. FINAL PRESENTATION
   Working collaboratively with two or three partners, you will create and present a focused oral presentation using PowerPoint slides.

- Grades that fall within a point of a borderline may be raised at the instructor’s discretion to reward outstanding classroom participation. Classroom participation doesn’t just mean talking in discussion; it includes asking meaningful questions and responding thoughtfully to the contributions of others. It also means being present, alert, and engaged on a regular basis.
- The cauldron will probably contain a few hundred points by the end of the quarter. Your score will be determined by how many of the possible points you earned (100%? 75%? etc.), and that score will be weighted as 20% of your course grade.
- Other grades you can receive in this class: W (student withdrawal – check deadline), V (instructor withdrawal -- by request only and at the option of the instructor), N (audit – you must sign up for this before the drop deadline)
- Grades NOT offered in this class: I (incomplete) & Y (in progress)

CANVAS

- We have a Canvas website for this course. However, because this course is face-to-face and not online, regular announcements and course handouts will not normally be available there. To know what’s going on, you must attend class.
- However, links to some free, online required reading may be posted on Canvas, and if inclement weather forces a campus closure, you should check Canvas for information (if you have power, that is!).
- To log in, go to https://everettcc.instructure.com to access Canvas. You’ll need your student ID number and PIN. For FAQs and help, go to our EvCC e-learning website at http://www.everettcc.edu/elearning/canvas/
- If you don’t have fast and reliable internet access at home, plan on accessing Canvas from an on-campus computer. For a current list of computer lab locations and hours, go to http://www.everettcc.edu/administration/college-services/it/index.cfm?id=2476

The College will make reasonable accommodations for person with documented disabilities. Students should notify the Center for Disability Services office (located in Parks 267, right across from the bookstore) and their instructors of any special needs. Instructors should be notified as soon as possible.

I expect Academic honesty.
- Students will not copy the work of others (this includes material in books as well as other students’ work) and submit it as if it were their own.
- For all assignments and quizzes, you are expected to do your own work without consulting anyone else.
- All parties involved in any cheating will receive failing grades regardless of who is at fault, so guard your work.
- Use of another person’s idea, whether you put quotations marks around it or not, constitutes plagiarism unless you accurately cite your sources.
- In addition, if you decide to paraphrase source material and do not substantially alter the wording and structure of the original, you commit plagiarism even if you cite the source! When in doubt, ask for help.

Any violation of this policy will result in a 0 on the assignment with no chance to resubmit and/or a grade of F in the class.
My Expectations: Be Here Now!
The following list is dedicated to creating a classroom climate that is engaging, mutually respectful, and conducive to learning. Please think about all your actions in class in regards to the commonweal (that is, all the other people in the room with you who are hoping to use this time profitably).

1. When you come to class, please be present both physically and mentally. Please do not sleep, check email, surf the web, text message, or do homework for this class or any other during our class hour.

2. Please turn off all electronic devices (such as phones, music players, and tablets and laptops) during the class hour.

3. Side-talk (whispering to your neighbor during class) is not acceptable in the college classroom. It shows disrespect to your fellow students and the instructor, and may make it difficult for others to hear what is being said in class. Students with hearing disabilities have often told me that they simply cannot hear the discussion when side-talk is occurring, no matter how “whispered” it is.

4. Take notes during class discussion and lecture. The material presented is directly relevant to understanding the books & preparing for the exams I suggest that you find a partner (or two!) so that if you miss a class, you can find out what you missed and obtain class notes. You can use Canvas to contact each other. That’s why it’s important to check it frequently and make sure you set up your college email account to forward all messages to your preferred email account.

5. Please make arrangements so that you don’t have to get up and leave in the middle of a class. If a departure is unavoidable, please sit right next to the door to minimize the disruption.

6. Also, please do not start packing up your books & papers before the hour is over. The noise is very distracting and it is disrespectful to whoever may be speaking at that time.

7. If you have to turn in a paper or talk to me outside of our class hour, please come to my office so that we may talk privately. It is not acceptable to interrupt while I am teaching another class. By the way, please do take advantage of my office hours! I value the time I get to spend with you one-on-one!

8. Please treat one another with respect and to tolerate a diversity of opinions and perspectives in the classroom. This includes listening to each person’s contribution.
