

About our program

Students interested in newspaper and magazine reporting, broadcasting, advertising, public relations, public affairs, sociology, or the law are among those who consider concentrating in Journalism or mass communication studies.

This program serves five main functions:

- Train students for careers in Journalism and related communications work, such as public relations and writing for the Web.
- Train students to work on the College newspaper, The Clipper, the major outlet for campus news. Training includes print and Web publication.
- Help students improve writing, editing and critical-thinking skills.
- Help students achieve media literacy and a better understanding of the mass media and the role of communication in society.
- Help students achieve or update computer proficiencies in writing, editing, multimedia storytelling, and publication design.

The recommended course of study in Journalism includes JOURN 101, Newswriting; JOURN 102, Copy Editing; JOURN 110, Media Writing; JOURN 111, Multimedia Journalism; CMST& 102 [JOURN 150], Mass Media; JOURN 170, College Newspaper; and JOURN 195, Portfolio Review.

Students are encouraged to seek internships for college credit and practical experiences.

Students who enroll in JOURN 170 participate in production of The Clipper, the campus newspaper and news Website. This course may be repeated for credit and affords a variety of practical experience in news reporting and production, including writing, editing, page design, photo journalism, advertising management and Web production.

Students interested in newspaper design would benefit from GRAPH 201 and 202, and the GRAPH section of JOURN 170. Students interested in photojournalism would benefit from PHOTO 110.

Planning your future

EvCC's two-year program in Journalism and mass communications is designed chiefly for students who plan to transfer to four-year colleges and universities. Most students seek bachelor's degrees.

At EvCC, students interested in Journalism are encouraged to pursue the Associate in Arts and Sciences - Option II. This degree meets statewide guidelines for smooth transfer to Washington's colleges and universities, and to some Oregon universities. With this degree, students will have completed most or all lower-division, general-education courses typically required within a bachelor's degree. The complete description of this degree program, with a checklist, is provided in this Associate in Arts and Sciences – Option II Direct Transfer Guide. A specific checklist for a Journalism major is on the reverse side.

Students will be best positioned to make wise choices for their program of study if they seek early consultation with the Journalism advisor. Students who plan to transfer after completing their program at EvCC should also familiarize themselves, as early as possible, with the graduation requirements of the four-year college or university to which they hope to transfer. For example, certain math and/or world language courses may be required.
